Stanley Thorogood (1873-1953),

Stanley Thorogood (1873-1953),

'Elizabeth I on horseback', an earthenware figure, an early prototype for Royal Doulton, modelled seated on horseback, with polychrome decoration, incised signature on both sides, 30cm wide

30.5cm high, on an ebonised wood plinth

Stanley Thorogood (1873-1953) was Superintendent of Art Instruction, Stoke-on-Trent, 1913-19. From 1920, he was Director of Camberwell Art School in London.

Born in 1873, Stanley Thorogood trained at Brighton School of Art and won a Gold Medal Travelling Scholarship to Italy. He was particularly inspired by imagery, mostly 19th century romantic depictions, of medieval knights. Commonly known for his three-dimensional sculptures - including a knight on horseback, c.1915, at Brighton Art Gallery - he pursued an interest in medieval equestrian subjects.

Condition Report

Size off plinth, Horses ear missing - crazing overall. Possible restoration to the lace fringing.
